

Arts and crafts celebration planned

By Patti Kasselman

Booths, music, contests and displays of artistic talent will be part of "Crafts Celebration '75" an all-day festival to be sponsored by LSUS April 4.

The celebration and exhibition will be in the LSUS mall from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. and is open to adult craftsmen and high school students creating original works. Participants may submit two entries for consideration. Campus organizations are invited to sponsor booths.

Categories for art entries include batik, basketry, candles, ceramics, dolls, enamels and glass. Others are jewelry, macrame, musical instruments, metalwork, plastics, textiles and woodworking.

Participants from Caddo, Bossier, Webster, Claiborne, Bienville, Desoto, Red River and Sabine parishes are eligible to enter the exhibit. Entries must be delivered to juror's site with identification cards attached by 10 a. m. April 4. The juror's site will be marked with a sign in the mall.

Campus organizations are planning everything from coke booths to a bicycle-beer race the day of the celebration, according to Eva Gerteis, president of the Intra Organizational Council (IOC).

Gerteis said any organization wishing to participate in the celebration must contact her no later than April 2 at 3:30. Messages may be left for her in the Alpha Phi mailbox next to the Student Affairs office.

According to Gerteis, craft items offered for sale must be original creations, and not kits and the like. "We don't want to bleed the community," she said, adding that booths should be designed more for the convenience of visitors, such as refreshment stands, than as major money-making ventures.

Gerteis added that all clubs and students participating will be expected to help police the area and keep it free from litter. Booths are to be set up the morning of the festival and must be removed by that evening, according to Gerteis. Participation in the celebration is encouraged because, Gerteis said, it's time "we show people that campus organizations are capable of doing something together."

Craftsmen must provide their own equipment and a limited number of tables will be available.

Works submitted will be judged at 2 p. m. by Mary Terzia, Don Alexander, and Chryl Savoy, each an assistant professor of fine arts. Rejected entries must be picked up by 3 p. m. or they will become the property of LSUS.

According to Terzia, 16 area craftsmen have confirmed that they will be on campus to give demonstrations of their art. Metalworking and pottery are among planned exhibits. Also, Terzia said, the Art Club will put on a "happening" involving a parachute for children attending the celebration.

In addition, a concert of jazz, folk and country music performed by local talent is slated to begin at 2 p. m. and end at dusk. The concert is tentatively scheduled for the mall. In case of bad weather, it will be in the Science Lecture Auditorium.

By Southern Association

Accreditation to be decided

By Garrett Stearns

"The accreditation of LSUS as a baccalaureate degree-granting institution will be evaluated March 31-April 3 by a Visiting Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS)," according to Dr. Gary K. Brashier, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs.

"The SACS committee will interview faculty, staff and students about all aspects of LSUS," said Dr. Brashier. "The results of the committee's report will go to the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association; if the vote is favorable in the association's annual meeting in December, then LSUS will be accredited," he said. "Everything appears favorable for LSUS to become an accredited baccalaureate degree-granting institution," agreed both Dr. Brashier and C. R. McPherson, assistant to the vice chancellor for Academic Affairs.

This is the fourth and final phase in the accreditation process for LSUS. Its purpose is to secure autonomous accreditation as a member in the southeast region of SACS. "It is the result of three years of hard work by the faculty and staff to get this accomplished," Dr. Brashier said.

Areas to be evaluated given

In this upcoming phase specific areas of LSUS to be evaluated include "Purpose, Organization and Administration, Educational Program and Faculty (Colleges of General Studies, Business Administration, Education, Liberal Arts and Sciences), Finances, Library, Student Development Services, Physical Plant, Special Activities and Research," according to a SACS assignment memorandum.

Chairman of the 10 member visiting committee is Fred J. Benson, dean of the College of Engineering at Texas A&M University. The committee also includes Dr. H.H. Funderburk, vice president of Auburn University at Montgomery; Allan W. Barber, vice president for Business and Finance at the University of Georgia; Dr. Kenneth L. Curtis, vice president for Student Affairs at the University of West Florida; and Lelia G. Rhodes, associate director of the Library at Florida State University.

Other SACS committee members are Dr. Harvey Craft, dean of Instruction at Mississippi University for Women; Dr. Robert Clute, head of the political science department at the University of Georgia; Dr. Helen L. Whidden, chairman of the department of chemistry at Randolph-Macon Woman's College; Dr. Jerry H. Padgett, dean of the School of Business Administration at Winthrop College; and Dr. Paul Ford Davis, vice president for Academic Affairs at Morehead State University.

Accreditation phases reviewed

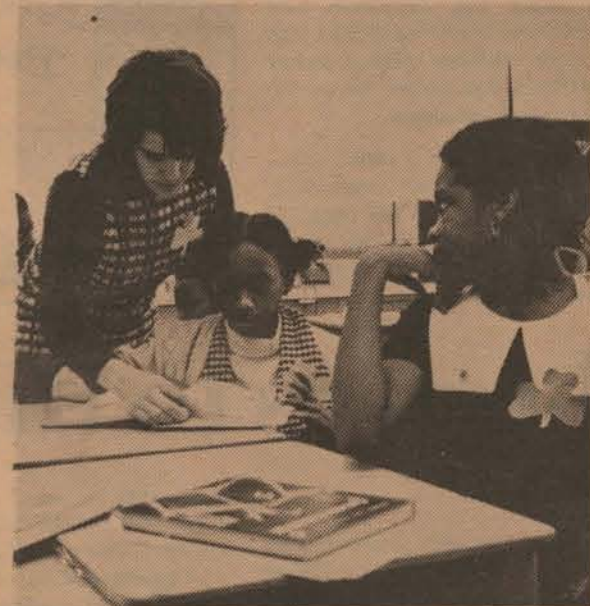

Giving a brief review of the accreditation phases, Dr. Brashier said the first phase "started in 1972 when a LSUS Steering Committee was formed to do a self-study report. The second phase in 1973 consisted of a SACS Committee Visit to LSUS, similar to the one that is coming," he said. "On the basis of the committee's 1973 report, LSUS was given the status of candidate for accreditation," explained Dr. Brashier. The third phase in 1974 was "a follow-up report which was an intensive look at the phases of our program by faculty and staff again, and specifically to review the first evaluation recommendations and take the necessary actions," he said.

An April 3 meeting of the SACS Evaluation Committee with the LSUS Steering Committee will conclude the fourth phase here. "At the meeting the SACS committee will give an oral report of their findings," said Dr. Brashier.

Steering Committee Named

The LSUS steering committee consists of Dr. Gary K. Brashier, chairman of the steering committee; Dr. Mary Ann McBride, dean of the College of Liberal Arts; Dr. Thomas A. Moss, dean of the College of Sciences; Dr. Vincent J. Marsala, dean of the College of General Studies; Dr. Kenneth R. Grubbs, dean of the College of Business; and Dr. Bobby E. Tabarlet, dean of the College of Education.

Others serving on the steering committee are Dr. Jimmie N. Smith, vice chancellor for Student Affairs; D. A. J. Howell, vice chancellor for Business Affairs; and Dr. Glyn J. Corley, chairman of the department of mathematics.

Elizabeth Feibel, senior special education major, lends a helping hand to a student at Eden Gardens School in Shreveport. Feibel teaches at the school as part of the "practicum" offered through the special education department.

Student teachers learn by helping children

Senior special education majors receive supervised working experience with exceptional children in a "practicum" course, Education 360, which places LSUS students in Shreveport public schools. Similar to an internship program, the student in the program is guided by a qualified supervising teacher.

According to Dr. Larry Marshman, director of the Special Education Center and assistant professor of education, 48 students are enrolled in the program, 6 of which are seniors.

"The amount of time a student spends depends on the situation. However, approximately 10 hours per week or two hours a day is the average. Additionally, the course is taught pass-fail for three hours credit."

Once in the assigned classroom, the student teacher is encouraged to apply new methods learned in other special education courses. The student benefits from previous studies by implementing, first hand, techniques she has learned.

"Also, interning in this manner acts as a screening process, determining the students ability to cope with the workload. After a few weeks those who are not able to handle the working conditions screen themselves and drop out of the program," said Marshman.

"After completing requirements, a student is placed according to his preferences in regards to areas of concentration. LSUS students in public schools work primarily with borderline (intelligence) children," he added.

Currently, there are six seniors in the program. The students and schools they teach at are Marsha McGee, AC Steere Elementary; Doug Campbell, Atkins Elementary; Elizabeth Feibel, Eden Gardens Elementary; Nancy Irby, Creswell Elementary; and Renea Tolbert and Ruth Burns, Forest Hills Elementary.

Elizabeth Feibel finds the work rewarding. Under the guidance of her supervising teacher, she uses a modern technique of issuing rewards, a technique not used before at the school.

10 students file

Ten students have filed for the offices of president and vice president of the LSUS Student Government Association with voting to be held April 7-10 for night students and April 9-10 for day students.

Balloting for education and business majors will be held in room 236 of the Library Building, while liberal arts, general studies and science students should vote in room 107 of the Liberal Arts building. Night students can vote from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. and day students between the hours of 9 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Candidates for SGA president are: Preston Friedley, Mark Graham, Dubba Hermes, Billy G. Lyons, Reid Miller and James M. Stanford.

For the office of vice president, candidate are Paul Akers, John Meier, Tim Hardy and Randy Chaffee.

All LSUS students, whether full or part time, are eligible to participate in the election. For information on candidates and their platforms, see pages 4 and 5.

Friedley, Hardy best choices

Based upon our knowledge of the candidates themselves, their past records and their platforms, the Almagest supports Preston Friedley for SGA president and Tim Hardy for SGA vice president.

Aside from experience and the ability to follow through with something, LSUS needs SGA officials who care enough about students to get out on a grass roots level, talk to them and represent their views.

Another qualification that we feel is important is the ability of the president and vice president to bring the executive and legislative branches of SGA into a more cohesive body. A closer knit SGA can better serve the interests of students.

Finally, and most importantly, students need SGA officials who have the tenacity to work for student needs in the face of an unresponsive administration.

We believe Preston Friedley and Tim Hardy have those qualities. The Almagest urges LSUS students to study the candidates and then vote.

Letters to the editor

To the editor:

I was terribly disheartened after reading some of Chancellor Shipps' remarks made at a luncheon mentioned in the March 7 issue of the paper concerning day care on this campus. His key words, "... if the need could be shown" are the crux of the whole matter.

Those of us trying to work on this project are handicapped at the starting point — a need. We can't print a form in your paper for those with a need to fill out, nor can we mail anything to married students or faculty because of the "Buckley Amendment", so we were informed.

I'm not positive of the statistics, but I believe that one-third of the student body attending LSUS is married. That is a beginning for a need. What we need is a means of communicating with those with a need.

I can't understand why none of the faculty has shown any interest in this project. I ask them to think of the benefits to the university such as a model day care plan with possibly pre-school education facilities could mean in practical learning situations. Are the faculty members even more apathetic than the students? We need their support if we are ever to accomplish anything. And it's not an impossible dream — many of our neighboring universities in the state have such facilities. Yes, we have a need for interested persons to let their voices be heard.

It's a shame to stifle such a promising program. We recently surveyed the "Snack Shack" with the idea of converting that building into day care facilities, but it seems the chancellor has already made up his mind to give it to the fine arts department. It seems that everywhere we turn we meet dead ends because of an engulfing lack of support. So please, anyone out there interested let your voices be heard and become involved. We must have your support now or this is a dead issue. Let me voice one more complaint. The person responsible for the design of the ScienceLecture Auditorium had to be ignorant of one of the most basic needs of the human being — the need for rest room facilities. It's a long walk to the "Snack Shack" on a Friday night during the movie when a certain urge overcomes you, not to even mention missing at least five or more minutes of the movie. Enough said, I think, to get the point across.

George Anders

To the editor:

In my belief, the current verbal war raging on the LSUS battlefield, if not quelled soon, could go on forever. ("infinite ad nauseum," so to speak)

The constant exchanges between SGA members and their officials have persisted since last fall and I, for one, want to know when, if ever, it will end. If these people keep it up much longer, the overdose on this campus will not be of dope, but one of talk, talk, talk. Yacking one to death is not a very ethical way of limiting the population. Instead of all this nyaah-nyaahing and harrasing and haranguing, why don't these warring factions take some steps?

The pro-Sanders bunch could launch a massive support program for him, or the anti-Sanders bunch could impeach Tony if they so desired and get it over with, or the middle-of-the-roads might suffice the issue with a slap on Tony's hands or ten lashes with a wet noodle if deserved. But why in the world is it necessary to keep on and on and on? Do these people keep the flame going just to have something to gripe about? Do they need some outlet for their now-displaced pent-up rage?

Instead of the ridiculousness which has persisted for so long, perhaps the energy which is consumed by prolonged battle could be utilized in better ways. For example, why don't some of the people in question get on the stick to Baton Rouge and see what's holding up the already-granted funds for the building of the student union, so at least our grandchildren could enjoy it?

For sure, discussions and debates are vital to any government, but in this day and age when peace is a precious gem, why must LSUS be in such a lengthy and boiling fuddle over comparatively minor issue? There have been problems, decidedly, in the SGA, but since now it has apparently spread to the administration, where will it end? When and if LSUS acquires housing facilities, will this acquisition bring with it campus-wide dissension and unrest, now commonplace in many universities across the nation?

Surely, casual observers reading about the petty, heated and hated debates in the Almagest, would think at least twice before trying to make this warring environment their learning environment. They would not be to blame, either. The potential good quality of the Almagest is too often smeared with mantaccusations from one party to another and back and forth again and again, which only result in too large a percentage of the paper being devoted to these angry and resentful people and their views. Freedom of speech is one thing, but slander and libel are a couple more.

A fine reputation, which is vital to the success and popularity of LSUS, takes lots of hard work. Internal problems engulfing the students and their governing body do not aid the procedure.

It is my belief that when students here elect their governing body, they vest in them the duties of bettering LSUS. To my knowledge, these duties do not include senseless and useless bickering. Am I wrong?

'Louisiana turned the other cheek'

BY George Sylvie
Contributing Editor

And God said, "Let there be desegregation." To which Louisiana turned the other cheek.

"God" is the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). The statement was made in January 1974 and was aimed primarily at the Southern University system and at Grambling College, both "markedly inferior" according to HEW. The state of Louisiana has not submitted a desegregation proposal.

Meanwhile, the public, along with college students, teachers and staffs have been kept in a limbo that at times feels like hell. Uncle Sam has threatened to withhold money from Aunt Louise unless her schools are racially integrated. He has left it up to her to work out a plan, but she is content to sit on her super-priced Superdome and settle things in court.

While nothing has been done, we have been left to debate the issue and I have come up with some suggestions.

Those deciding the issue should remember what's at stake. Black identity, as represented by Grambling and Southern is just not something to overlook and disregard. You can't just take a black person away from the school of his choice and tell him that the education he's getting is "markedly inferior."

The state officials responsible for submitting a plan should be questioned as to why they neglected their duty. Were they foolish enough to believe they could fight and win against the federal government? And if one system is inferior, why wasn't something done to bring it up to par? If we can spend $163 million for entertainment, then why can't we spend at least that much to better our colleges?

If and when the merger occurs, according to HEW's statements about the systems' inequality, the one existing system will also be below par. And if some people know that a university gives its students only a half-decent education, then they will go to some other school. The university's enrollment will decline, and with no students there will be no need for a university. Thus we see the Domino Theory applies to education.

What is to happen to the existing facilities if integration comes about? What's going to happen to which campus? Will the Tigers or Jaguars or Bulldogs or Pilots survive? Will Charly Mac or Eddie Robinson be out of a job? Not only will there be a question about athletics but some schools will have new administrators, causing communication problems among persons accustomed to the previous system. And we have failed to mention the possible impact on the communities involved, especially Grambling and Ruston, two similar, yet different, towns.

No one wants to see bad things result from good intentions. Everybody wants a good education, but they would like to have a choice about where they get it from. Many would like to see more cooperation between Southern and LSU, but not as much as "God" suggests. The public favors "sinning" in this instance, and "God" has become the bad guy.

Career day aids future graduates

By Bess Maxwell

Liberal arts (LA) majors got a taste of "life after college" at the Careers Day program sponsored by the College of Liberal Arts on March 12 and 13 at LSUS.

The two-day program, designed to familiarize students with various careers and opportunities in the liberal arts field, was the result of months of work by the LA faculty. Dr. Mary McBride, dean of the college, said the program was not only important to students, but that "we ourselves as faculty members needed to be educated . . . we needed more exposure to the concept of careers."

Wednesday's program, entitled "Careers and the Liberal Arts," held in the Science Lecture Auditorium, featured a panel including James C. Gardner, vice president of administration for SWEPCO; Cecil E. Ramey Jr., a Shreveport attorney; and Stanley R. Tiner, editor of the Shreveport Journal. Dr. McBride was moderator.

Enthusiasm is important

Gardner spoke about the opportunities for LA graduates in the field of big business. He stressed the importance of enthusiasm and said the LA graduate had excellent chances for advancement with a large corporation.

Ramey said that "knowledge for its own sake is the hallmark of the liberal arts education." He also stressed the importance of the ability to communicate effectively no matter what career the graduate hoped for.

Tiner also emphasized the importance of communication and said he believed the world's future lay with the LA graduates. All three speakers emphasized the ability to communicate as vital in any field.

Other activities

Thursday's activities included another panel, "Exploring the Liberal Arts" with LA department heads as speakers. Dr. Gary K. Brashier, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs was moderator. Panel members were Shirley Brown, chairman of the foreign language department; Dr. Dalton Cloud, chairman of the communications department; Dr. Moriece Gleason, chairman of the English department; and Dr. John W. Hall, chairman of the social sciences department.

One of the highlights of the day was the Career Information portion of the program, which gave both students and faculty an opportunity to talk with representatives of various fields about careers. The representatives answered questions and gave pointers for an hour and a half.

The program ended Thursday afternoon with a talk on "Job Hunting Made Easy" by Phyllis Graham, director of placement services of LSUS.

To be chartered tonight

Business fraternity formed

By Garrett Stearns

The newly-formed LSUS Chapter of Pi Sigma Epsilon Fraternity will receive its national charter tonight at a 6 p. m. installation in the Captain Shreve Hotel.

Dr. Carl T. Eakin, national president of Pi Sigma Epsilon, will preside. Dr. Eakin is dean of the School of Business at the University of Louisville. After the installation, a banquet will be held for members and guests.

Pi Sigma Epsilon, a professional fraternity in marketing and sales management, is sponsored at LSUS by the Shreveport Chapter of the Sales and Marketing Executives Club. "Since the LSUS organization's founding on February 21, the club has grown to include 55 student members, 14 Sales and Marketing Executives Club members, and 4 faculty members," according to Carla Lehnertz, secretary of the LSUS chapter.

Other officers of the organization include James Cousins, president; Johnnie West, vice president; Brian Taylor, treasurer; and Jerry Seymour, sergeant at arms.

Faculty members are Dr. Kenneth R. Grubbs, dean of the College of Business Administration; Todd Y. Tillman, assistant to the dean of the College of Business Administration; Dr. John L. Berton, professor of business administration; and Joseph Abramson, assistant professor of business administration.

The six purposes of Pi Sigma Epsilon are (1) to create a collegiate brotherhood of persons who are interested in the advancement of marketing, sales management and selling as a career and a profession; (2) to promote the study of marketing, sales management, selling and related fields in colleges and universities; (3) to bring together academically qualified students who express a desire to enter the fields of professional marketing, sales management and selling; (4) to encourage in colleges and universities the establishing of courses preparing students for careers in professional marketing, sales management and professional selling; (5) to stimulate improved methods and techniques in the fields of marketing, sales management and professional selling; and (6) to instill in its members the highest possible ethical standards in selling.

According to the fraternity membership manual, the organization "has continually striven to derive a cross — section of colleges and universities." "Chapters are located in all types and sizes of qualified schools in the North, South, East and West, including the Hawaiian Islands," it further stated.

"Membership in the campus fraternity is open to any LSUS student interested in the field of sales and marketing, regardless of the student's major," said Lehnertz. "Any student interested in more information should contact one of the officers or Todd Tillman," she added.

In SGA action

Representation approved

By Randy Griffith

A resolution approving more student representation on faculty committees was passed by the Student Government Association (SGA) Friday.

The resolution was in the form of approval of recommendations submitted by SGA president Tony Sanders. They will be submitted to the Faculty Council and, if passed, to Chancellor Donald E. Shipp for final approval.

The recommendations called for a dramatic increase in the total number of students on the various faculty committees, from the present 7 to 21.

On most committees the proposed increase was by only 1 or 2 students, but on others the increase was much greater. For example, Sanders recommended an increase of 5 students on the Student Affairs committee, bringing the total to 7. There are 10 faculty members on the committee.

Correction

Last week the Almagest erroneously reported that no formal report was ever given by a group of SGA senators about a trip to Texas A&M University. An oral report, as required, was given to the senate by the chairman of the committee.

Other committees and the proposed student-faculty ratios are: Admissions & Standards, two students — five faculty; Courses & Curricula, two students — seven faculty; Artists & Lecturers, two students — five faculty; Library, two students — eight faculty;

Communications Advisory, four students — five faculty; and Special Academic Programs, two students — five faculty.

Equal representation on the Student Affairs committee "probably wouldn't even be considered by the Faculty Council"; they would probably throw it out," Preston Friedley commented.

The proposed recommendation for the Student Affairs committee brought the "no" vote from James Hytt, who wanted an equal number student-faculty members in the committee.

However, several other senators cautioned the senate not to ask for too much at one time.

Paul Akers

Vice Presidential candidate Paul Akers is a senior communications major. He is a substitute teacher and volunteer instructor for remedial reading for Caddo Parish. He was a sophomore senator and is now vice president of the Student Government Association (SGA). He is also president of the Student Louisiana Teachers Association (SLTA).

My only platform objective in seeking re-election to the position of SGA vice president is continued service to the student body of LSUS. I could prepare a complicated platform promising a lot of impressive things and stating what I am going to do for you during my year in office.

However, I do not want to insult the intelligence of my constituents and neither will I stoop to lies to impress them. I have learned through experience as your SGA vice president that the situation can have as much control over the individuals concerned as they have over the situation.

I have experienced some degree of disappointment with the SGA this year. But I feel the SGA can divert a similar situation this year if the student body is conscientious enough to investigate the candidates seeking election and wise enough to elect persons who are familiar with the operation and function of our student government, unless they are willing to handicap the effectiveness.

As a student, be responsible, ask questions about the candidates and then vote for the one you feel can best represent you.

meet the demands of a growing university.

Preston Friedley

A junior political science major, Preston Friedley is a candidate for president. He has been an SGA senator for two years and is chairman of the Student Welfare and Rules Committees. He is also a member of the SGA Budget Committee as well as president pro-tempore of the senate. Friedley is an International Student Union delegate and is a member of the Prelaw Club, Sigma Alpha Upsilon and Kappa Alpha. In addition, he is public relations chairman of the Law Society.

This year as SGA senator I have presented nearly one-fourth of all bills, acts and resolutions in the senate. I have sponsored bills to provide for such things as class schedules for students, a student loan service and deferral of payment for tuition.

My objectives for next year include: (1) improve communication between the SGA and student body; (2) create an active program of student input on student-faculty committees; (3) establish a public relations office; (4) promote development and proper use of the executive council of the SGA; (5) help in the direction and expansion of fraternities and sororities; and (7) promote an expansion of student lobbying activities in the state.

Mark Graham

A junior general studies major, Mark Graham is running for SGA president. He is a former SGA treasurer and research coordinator. Also, Graham is president of Kappa Alpha and a member of Phi Sigma Epsilon and Sigma Alpha Upsilon. He is also a former treasurer of the LSU art theater.

As SGA president, my first priority would be that of making the SGA responsible to the students of LSUS. In order to do so, every possible avenue of communication would be opened between the SGA and students.

It is time the president took the time to look at the needs of the students. In doing so, I will take no credit for the good that the SGA might do. I will be responsible for the "bad decisions" made in the SGA, and in doing so, I would hopefully bring back the creditability which the SGA president has lacked for the past four administrations.

I will concentrate my efforts in three areas: (1) SGA reforms, including a judicial branch and student control of student funds; (2) university benefits, including longer library hours and NCAA sports; and (3) student benefits, including an academic appeals board and legal aid for students.

Also, if no progress concerning present issues before the senate is made, I will do everything possible to abolish the senate and create a more responsible efficient form of student government which would be representative of the student body. It is time for our present nightmare to come to an end.

Tim Hardy

Tim Hardy, candidate for vice president, is a junior history major and a substitute teacher for Caddo parish. In the SGA he is vice chairman of the Academics and Social Welfare Committee, a member of the Student Welfare and Rules committees, parliamentarian and has been a senator for two years. In addition, he was chairman of the Campus-Wide Discussion Committee. He is an Interorganizational Council delegate for the Law Society and a member of the Business and Social Science clubs.

In the past I have sponsored several SGA programs for SGA improvement, including adoption of new rules of order to facilitate business and passage of legislation to give salaries to the SGA secretary and treasurer in order to make the SGA more efficient and dependable. I was also recently one of the delegates who talked to Gov. Edwin Edwards about a health and P.E. building.

My goals for next year include: (1) obtaining funds for a health and P.E. building and site work; (2) a better organized student activities program; (3) working for an LSUS foundation; (4) establishing a used book depository so that students have a place to sell back their books at a reasonable price; and (5) working to enlarge the placement service.

Dubba Hermes

Senator Dubba Hermes, a candidate for president, is a junior history major. He is chairman of the Academic and Social Freedoms Committee. He was also a delegate to a legal rights convention in New York last year.

A platform is by nature unfulfilled promises. It is an attempt to undertake problems that exist and hopefully to succeed in a few.

Yet the thing that must be remembered in judging whether a platform is fulfilled or not is "Did I undertake what I said I could and did I improve the situation for my fellow student?" This, in essence, is my objective, "to make things better for my fellow student."

My program is six-fold: (1) help initiate an alternate funding procedure; (2) obtain the necessary approval and fund for a health and P.E. building; (3) establish a Day Care Center; (4) work for approval of a student bill of rights; (5) the creation of an appeals board (for final grades); (6) establish a method of obtaining legal help for students not limited to educational uses.

More importantly is that I wish to work with the students and their chosen representatives in an atmosphere of trust and respect.

Billy G. Lyons

Billy G. Lyons, a senior education major, is a candidate for president. He is a retired U.S. navy commander and a veteran of World War II, and the Korea and Vietnam wars. A former Shreveport zoning administrator, Lyons is also a member of the SLTA.

I pledge a three point program dedicated to the continued growth and development of student and academic affairs at LSUS, consisting of realistic and obtainable goals:

1) Under existing programs, I pledge immediate action to consolidate, improve, expand and implement those programs procedures heretofore approved but not acted on, or presently considered unsatisfactory, such as restoring dignity and decorum in all offices of the SGA and exercising firm and judicious control over SGA funds.

2) In academic and administrative areas, I will seek to revise and update current procedures in selected areas, such as expediting registration procedures for all students in general, seniors in particular, and seeking a review and justification from the administration for bookstore prices.

3) For new programs and actions, I will seek to initiate new actions and programs in growth areas, such as procedures for keeping student-generated funds at LSUS for exclusive use at LSUS activities and the establishment of an active, full-time university public relations department.

John Meier

Candidate for vice president, John Meier is a junior liberal arts senator. He is chairman of the Legislative Committee and the Student Welfare Committee. He is also a member of the Rules Committee. Last year, he was chairman of the delegation that attended a student legal rights conference at Texas A&M University and this year he was a delegate to a meeting with Gov. Edwin Edwards to discuss a health and P.E. building. He is a member of the Law Society, a referee in intramural sports, a Kappa Alpha pledge and a charter member of the Political Sciences Club.

I have been a viable and active force in the SGA in instituting legislation for promotion of student welfare. This enables me to say without reservation that I am a capable and nonpartisan candidate for vice president.

Furthermore, my plans for a more total interaction within the senate itself is a positive and complete program for SGA advancement. I propose to be aware of all the different viewpoints on any proposed issue at hand so that when senate meetings are held, the different senators will be informed before the meetings about particular bills and resolutions up for consideration.

I also will work to establish a working plan for the Union Board and to have student input on this before the student union building is complete.

Reid Miller

Candidate for president, Reid Miller is a junior general studies major. He is also a senator and a member of the Academics and Social Welfare Committee.

Beyond my academic pursuits at LSUS, my concerns here are for the students and the university. As an accomplished communicator, therefore a good listener, I am keenly aware of the needs of the students, which are also the needs of the university.

I believe the primary needs of this campus to be greater student participation in decision making and more fund raising activity. Neither of these needs are given adequate emphasis at the present time and both are essential. I do not pretend to be a politician, but I am a spokesman for the needs of the students and the university, which is what an SGA president should be.

Some people seeking public office outlined detailed plans and expectations and emphasize group affiliations. As far as I am concerned, the students are the group I am affiliated with and their needs determine whatever plans are formulated and put into effect.

The most important qualifications for a public servant are the ability to work with people and to express ideas. As I meet these qualifications, the students may elect me, no matter what promises I make. As I said, I am a spokesman for the needs of the students and the university and intend to continue, whether elected or not.

I simply feel that I would be able to do a better job as SGA president and this is the reason for my seeking office in the first place.

James M. Stanford

James M. Stanford is a sophomore presidential candidate. He is in the Six Year Medical Program. A resident of Shreveport since 1973, Stanford was valedictorian of Captain Shreve High School in 1973.

The goal of the SGA as set forth in the constitution is to "insure a practical system of self-government, protect student welfare, act in an advisory capacity to the administration and to promote cooperative communication among the students, the university personnel and the community."

If elected president of the SGA, I will execute the duties of office and responsibilities required to see that these goals are met and that there is an effective interaction between the students and the governing bodies to determine the nature and substance of those needs of university students which the SGA has the responsibility of meeting.

Included in the platform for my election is the pledge to help create more student interest in the affairs of our school by drawing from a broader background of students in the assessment and implication of legislation and activities for their benefit.

As your candidate for president, I am prepared to meet these needs and to work for the academic and social betterment of our facility.

Introspect...

By Carl Smith
Contributing Writer

There is no doubt the reality of the resurrection of Christ celebrated on Easter is the core of Christianity.

An examination of the sources used to support the theories of a mythical origin of the resurrection reveals the evidences are far from satisfactory. There is not room here to consider all the evidence. Suffice it to say the ancient concepts of life after death reflect an almost universal pessimism, with little of the confident victorious hope promised in the bodily resurrection of Christ.

Scriptural evidence includes

Who moved the stone?

the Apostle Paul's claim that more than 500 persons saw the risen Christ prior to His ascension of which "the greater part" were still living at the time of Paul's writing. His suggestion is "if you don't believe me, ask them." The Gospels record the appearance of the risen Christ on at least ten occasions. If one rejects this interpretation of the resurrection, one must supply a better alternative.

If indeed Jesus were still alive when laid in the tomb does it explain how he got up three days later, wounds no doubt infected gangrenous, and walked out? If so who moved the stone? How did he deceive the Roman guards? If the disciples went to the wrong tomb, that meant they were in the wrong garden altogether since Jesus was laid in a new tomb in the private garden of Joseph of Arimathea.

If it is true the disciples stole the body, what did they do with it? Can it be true these 11 frightened men who fled at the arrest suddenly found courage not only to perpetrate a fraud, but to die for a deliberate deception?

Not even the most skeptical can deny that something earth-shaking transformed those early Christians. A.M. Ramsey summed it up: "...the teaching... of Jesus did not provide the disciples with a Gosepl, and led them from puzzel to paradox until the resurrection gave them a key."

Beautiful Girl." Rich is the winner of such honors as Best Male Country Vocalist, a GRAMMY Award, and the Entertainer of the Year award. Tickets, priced at $7.50, $6.50, and $5.50, are on sale at the State Fair Office and at Stan's Records Shops.

'Paine' termed unique at Centenary College

By Eleanor Cullick
Contributing Writer

There is a theatrical "happening" at the Marjorie Lyons Playhouse this week. Doug Wilson, a Centenary drama major, is directing his first important production and has burst on the scene with his own, very unique interpretation of "Tom Paine" by Paul Foster.

It is extraordinary and will elicit no little response from audiences, whether they be shocked, amused, or entertained. Outrageous? Yes. Outlandish? Maybe.

The evening begins with wild abandon as all players are running about the theatre ad libbing and, it would seem, physically exhausting themselves before the play actually begins. And then, suddenly, the play has begun, the players don their costumes before your eyes, introduce themselves, and incoherence leads directly into controlled madness.

This production could only have been done in a college where the players have abandoned the preconceived mold, where the stage looks like a barn, complete with hay, hanging ropes and ladders but is extremely functional, and where the lighting is an absolute marvel.

Lest you be not aware, Tom Paine had something to do with the American Revolution, but don't expect a sedate, pedantic portrayal of the first important war in our country's history.

Lee Crook as Paine evolves the character's beginnings from immigrant in a filthy ship coming to these shores from England, to his involvement in political life here and in France where he is thrown into a French dungeon, to his living quarters in the hell hole of New York's lowest where he whores and drinks, and finally to his death.

It is a show played with enormous energy by a cast of 14 enthusiastic people where no one is really a star. It is repertory at its best. Especially fascinating was the political intrigue of Court played out as a chess game with humans as the pawns and the King emerges bouncing his imperial ball and singing "Sweet Georgia Brown." Comic strip balloons unfurl as players speak and the church is represented as a swishy character spewing forth cliches and sprinkling holy water into the audience, played with great verve by Pat McWilliams.

Paine seeks sorely needed arms for the soldiers and confronts the military, church and state represented by three faggots who camp it up and dance a minuet. Music is cleverly integrated into the proceedings with David Upton providing the musical accompaniment to bawdy, raucous songs.

Nothing is sacred. Therefore, if you are easily offended or shocked, stay away. But if you want to see the unusual and the exciting and learn history Doug Wilson style, then run, do not walk to see "Tom Paine." It only has two more performances, tonight and tomorrow night and student tickets are $1.50.

Special mention goes to Kip Holloway for his sets and lighting and to the costuming of Barbara Acker.

'Nazarin' slated

The LSUS International Cinema Society will present "Nazarin," a film with Spanish dialog and English subtitles, at 8 tonight in the Science Lecture Auditorium.

"Nazarin" is a past Grand Prize winner at the Cannes Film Festival. The film concerns a priest in the late 19th century who attempts to live by Christ's precepts. He has compassion for a prostitute, who, by a strange turn of events, ruins his life.

Admission to the film is $2 per person at the door. Membership in the organization is $5 for all of the films. Anyone interested in membership may contact Dr. Robert Leitz at ext. 292.

Opera concert

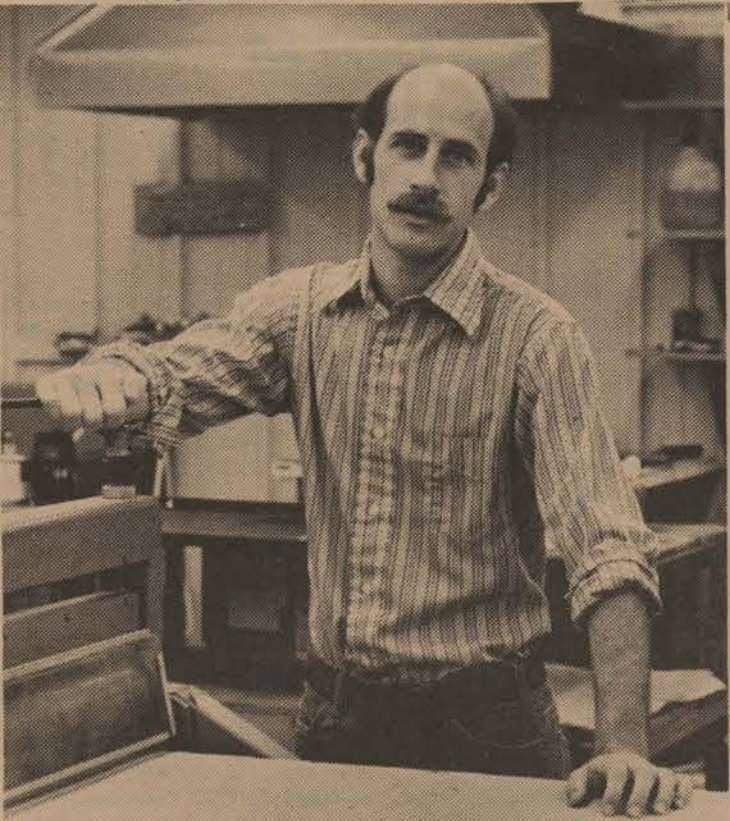

The next symphony concert, on April 6 and 7, will feature the Shreveport Symphony Repertory Opera Company's production of Verdi's "Rigoletto." The symphony's final concert of the season is scheduled for April 27 and 28. It will feature performances of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Symphony guests

Patricia McBride and Jean-Pierre Bonnefous, principal dancers with the New York City Ballet, will highlight an all-dance program Sunday at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Shreveport Civic Theater.

The guests will perform the pas de deux from "Le Corsaire" by Riccardo Drigo and the "Tchaikovsky Pas De Dux" with Choreography by George Balanchine.

The Shreveport Symphony Ballet Company, assisted by Southern Methodist University dancers, will perform "Voices of Spring" with music by Ottorino Respighi and "Sisters" with music by Samuel Barber.

A one-man art exhibit of the works of Gary Gaffney will be featured at the Art Gallery in La 336. The show will consist of etchings, engravings, and silkscreens by the New Orleans artist. Works by the thirty-year old artist have been exhibited in the Mid-western Graphics Competition, the Louisiana Arts Committee Student Show, the New Orleans Public Library Juried Graphics Competition, the Louisiana Arts Council College Craftsmen Show and Spring Fiesta Show, and the New Orleans Art Association Sculpture Show. Gaffney's works are shown in New Orleans at the Genesis Gallery, 3117 Magazine St.

Lynyrd Skynyrd appearance set

By Paula Seago

Lynyrd Skynyrd, a group known for their elemental blues sound, will be at Hirsch Memorial Coliseum at 8 p.m. on April 2.

The group owes its fame to the talents of three lead guitar player-vocalists: Allen Collins, Ed King and Gary Rossing; the powerful lead vocals of Ronnie Van Zandt; keyboard man Billy Power; drummer Bob Burns; and bass player Leon Wilkeson.

To quote rock publication "Zoo World," most of the band's music is "original, Southern ... rock, down-home foot-stomping blues and soaring melodies."

The group's first album, "Lynyrd Skynyrd," was released on Al Kooper's Sound of the South label (MCA). Lynyrd Skynyrd recently completed a nation-wide tour with The Who and will soon release their second album, also on the MCA label.

The name of the group? It is a gross misspelling of the band's high school gym coach who kicked them out of class because they wouldn't cut their hair. Today, he's one of their biggest fans.

Tickets are on sale at Stan's Record Shops and at the State Fair Office. Prices are $5 in advance; $6 the day of the show.

Debate team scores in major tournament

By Sandy Bellar

A second-place in the advanced division was won by the LSUS debate team of Mike Monsour and Robert Freeman at the Annual Invitation Forensic Tournament at Northwestern State University in Natchitoches.

Don Hutchinson also placed second in individual events with the dramatic interpretation of "Green Pastures."

In the junior division LSUS had two teams in competition. Both teams, one of Don Hutchinson and John Boston, and the other of Robert Bolin and Lydia Rhodes, received identical scores in elimination rounds and lost to Southwest Texas State early in the tournament. Twelve schools from Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and Connecticut entered teams in the tournaments.

Mary Jarzabec participated in oral interpretation, an individual event, which qualified her to compete in the national forensic tournament in Chicago during April.

To display the awards of LSUS debaters, a trophy case will be placed on the first floor of the Liberal Arts Building. Scheduled for April 18-19 is the State Forensic Tournament at Southeastern Louisiana University in Hammond.

"Other teachers are extremely impressed with a system of token reinforcement. Students accumulate points and are rewarded for positive behavior by a special free play period. It is a workable method as students strive to play in a box-like house," Feible said.

She continued, "All the seniors realize how worthwhile the practicum is and wish they had more time to spend with the children. My advice to those planning to student teach in a special education area is to do volunteer work with retarded children, slow learners or handicaps so as to become knowledgeable with the rewards and drawbacks of the profession."
